A Study on the Restriction of Leaving School in the Disciplinary Action Procedures

村山 洋介 (長崎大学経済学部)

Yosuke Murayama (Faculty of Economics, Nagasaki University)

Abstract:

Most of the regulations concerning disciplinary measures in universities include regulations which restrict student's leaving school. However, the Supreme Court admits the student's right of freely leaving school. When a university restricts student's right, a rational reason is necessary for the restriction. In this study, I explain the significance and the purpose of the restriction of leaving school after examining regulations on disciplinary measures in each university. Furthermore, I discuss in which cases the restriction on leaving school has its legitimacy.
